

Chris Jennings joins Skross travel retail team

Chris Jennings has joined Skross as International Business Development Manager to increase the Swiss travel accessories brand's presence

Chris Jennings, former Sales Manager at Scorpio Worldwide, has joined Skross as International Business Development Manager to increase the Swiss brand's presence in the market.

Commencing his role on September 1, UK-based Jennings brings valuable experience to the team. Following previous roles in sales management with other travel retail companies, including WHSmith, his focus will be on increasing support for business partners while accelerating international growth.

In his former position at Scorpio Worldwide, he also accrued nine years of experience working alongside the biggest airlines in the world and his role will strategically include an emphasis on building the airline business at Skross.

Sam Gerber, Managing Partner, Skross, said: "We are delighted to welcome Chris to our dynamic international team. He has proven track record of developing sales in the airline channel and we are convinced that Skross will profit from his experience and expertise in this business field."

Jennings will be attending the TFWA World Exhibition in Cannes in October at the Skross stand (Green Village L60).

The Skross product range includes world travel adapters, USB chargers for car and home, power banks and USB cables. All products are designed in Switzerland to meet high Swiss quality standards. Skross products are available in more than 100 countries.
