

J. Cortès lights up cigar category with Corona terroir tubes

J. Cortès has three Corona terroir tubes in its range: Honduras Corona, Dominican Corona and the classic J. Cortès Corona, each with its own distinct character

Cigar brand J. Cortès has introduced three new Corona terroir tubes.

The Corona is described as a straight cigar, approximately 14cm in length, with a rounded tip. Thanks to its larger diameter, this cigar variety is often smooth in flavor with a smoking time of around one hour, making it an ideal after-dinner cigar.

J. Cortès has three Corona terroir tubes in its range: the Honduras Corona, the Dominican Corona and the classic J. Cortès Corona, each with its own distinct character.

Honduras Corona: The wrapper on this Corona comes from Honduras, the third-largest cigar producer in the world. Its binder consists of Javanese Besuki tobacco, while the filler is a blend of different tobaccos that are mainly Central American in origin. This cigar has a light, smooth and well-rounded flavor and subtle aromas, making it suitable for aficionados and beginners alike.

Dominican Corona: The Dominican Corona is the lightest of these three Corona cigars. This smooth cigar will suit connoisseurs as well as casual enthusiasts. Its soft Dominican filler has been wrapped in a Javanese binder and rounded off with an Ecuadorian wrapper, giving this cigar a rich aroma.

Corona Sumatra: The blue color of the Corona Sumatra makes it recognizable to cigar aficionados. This classic line belongs to a small group of select cigars that are wrapped in genuine Sumatra leaves. The unique blend in this premium cigar has been sourced from the best Cuban Havana, Brazilian, Bahia and Indonesian Java tobaccos.
